

CONSEQUENCES: POTENTIAL ACID MINE DRAINAGE

Four sites including Great Barrier Reef could become “World Heritage in danger”, while Selous may lose its status – IUCN advice | IUCN

The potential consequences of acid mine drainage in the Dittmer Creek region are far-reaching, affecting water quality, aquatic life, human health, local economies, and the broader environment, including the Great Barrier Reef. Effective management and remediation are crucial to mitigating these impacts and protecting these valuable ecosystems.

WWW.SAVEWHITSUNDAYWATER.COM